Which of the following statements about motor vehicle production from 1950 to 1990 is most accurate?

- A. Japan production increased steadily while U.S. production declined.
- B. Production outside the countries of U.S. and Japan increased, then leveled off, then increased again.
- C. World production increased steadily while U.S. production declined.
- D. As a percentage of world production, U.S. production neither increased nor decreased.

E. As a percentage of world production, Japan production neither increased nor decreased.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Between 1970 and 1980, the increase in worldwide production (which includes Japan and the United States) was about the same as the net (combined) increase in Japan and U.S. production during the same decade, indicating no significant change in worldwide production, excluding the U.S. and Japan. However, during the previous two decades (1950-1970) and during the 1980s, worldwide increases exceeded net (combined) increases in the U.S. and Japan.
