NEW QUESTION: 1

You notice that your reports are running slower than before and realized that nothing in terms of data volume or dimension members has changed. You also checked the log file and found that no one ran any calculation.

Which two would you look for to diagnose the cause of this slower response time?

- A. Run a MaxL comment to see if the database is fragmented
- B. Check when was the last time the application was stopped
- C. Check the commit-level setting
- D. Check the data cache setting

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

A: Database fragmentation would slow down the database performance. You can use MaxL commands to check the fragmentation status.

C: The data cache could affect the running time of the reports. Checking this cache would be a good idea.

Incorrect answers

Stop time of the application is not of interest here.

The commit-level setting would affect real-time updates, not producing reports.

NEW QUESTION: 2

DRAG DROP

You have an availability set named AS1 that contains three virtual machines named VM1, VM2, and VM3.

You attempt to reconfigure VM1 to use a larger size. The operation fails and you receive an allocation failure message. You need to ensure that the resize operation succeeds.

Which three actions should you perform in sequence? To answer, move the appropriate actions from the list of actions to the answer area and arrange them in the correct order.

Select and Place:

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Step 1: Stop VM1, VM2, and VM3.

If the VM you wish to resize is part of an availability set, then you must stop all VMs in the availability set before changing the size of any VM in the availability set. The reason all VMs in the availability set must be stopped before performing the resize operation to a size that requires different hardware is that all running VMs in the availability set must be using the same physical hardware cluster.

Therefore, if a change of physical hardware cluster is required to change the VM size then all VMs must be first stopped and then restarted one-by-one to a different physical hardware clusters.

Step 2: Resize VM1.

Step 3: Start VM1, VM2, and VM3.
