NEW QUESTION: 3

A company has several Amazon EC2 instances in both public and private subnets within a VPC that is not connected to the corporate network. A security group associated with the EC2 instances allows the company to use the Windows remote desktop protocol (RDP) over the internet to access the instances. The security team has noticed connection attempts from unknown sources. The company wants to implement a more secure solution to access the EC2 instances.

Which strategy should a solutions architect implement?

- A. Deploy a Linux bastion host on the corporate network that has access to all instances in the VPC.
- B. Establish a Site-to-Site VPN connecting the corporate network to the VPC and update the security groups to allow access from the corporate network only.
- C. Deploy AWS Systems Manager Agent on the EC2 instances and access the EC2 instances using Session Manager, restricting access to users with permission.
- D. Deploy a Linux bastion host with an Elastic IP address in the public subnet. Allow access to the bastion host from 0.0.0.0/0.

Answer: A
