Which action does the Wireless Intrusion Prevention System (WlPS) take when it detects that a device is sending frames with a fixed initialization vector?

A. deauthenticates the user
B. captures the frames for future analysis
C. logs the event
D. adds the device to the dynamic blacklist
Answer: D
Explanation:
Flood attack refers to the case where WLAN devices receive large volumes of frames of the same kind within a short span of time. When this occurs, the WLAN devices are overwhelmed with frames from this device and consequently, frames from authorized stations get dropped. IDS attacks detection counters this flood attack by constantly keeping track of the density of traffic generated by each device. When this density exceeds the tolerance limit, the device is reported to be flooding the network and will be blocked. Subsequent frames from this device will not be processed. If the dynamic blacklist feature is enabled, the detected device is added to the blacklist. IDS detects the following types of frames: l Authentication requests and de-authentication requests l Association requests, disassociation requests and reassociation requests l Probe requests l Null data frames l Action frames.
