NEW QUESTION: 2

An application accesses a small lookup table frequently. You notice that the required data blocks are getting aged out of the default buffer cache.

How would you guarantee that the blocks for the table never age out?

- A. Configure Automata Shared Memory Management.
- B. Increase the database buffer cache size.
- C. Configure Automatic Memory Management.
- D. Configure the RECYCLE buffer pool and alter the table with the corresponding storage clause.
- E. Configure the KEEP buffer pool and alter the table with the corresponding storage clause.

Answer: E

Explanation:

Schema objects are referenced with varying usage patterns; therefore, their cache behavior may be quite different. Multiple buffer pools enable you to address these differences. You can use a KEEP buffer pool to maintain objects in the buffer cache and a RECYCLE buffer pool to prevent objects from consuming unnecessary space in the cache. When an object is allocated to a cache, all blocks from that object are placed in that cache. Oracle maintains a DEFAULT buffer pool for objects that have not been assigned to one of the buffer pools.

- B. If an update of the subordinate fabric interconnect leaves it in a nonusable state, the primary fabric interconnect will automatically be updated to ensure that one fabric interconnect is running the most recent firmware.
- C. If an I/O module is upgraded to a version that is incompatible with its fabric interconnect, the fabric interconnect can automatically reactivate the I/O module to a compatible version.
