NEW QUESTION: 3

Your customer has deployed an employee portal that you have protected with Oracle Access Manager (OAM). The customer now wants a new portlet added to the home page to display the employee's salary details. The portlet will obtain the information through a call to an internally exposed web service. Your customer has defined the following security requirements for the new portlet:

1. Employees must be authenticated through risk-based authentication before they can access the portal.
2. The web service must be secured from unauthenticated calls.
3. All security logic for the web service must be external to the web service.
4. The web service should return salary details only if the user's authentication risk score is below 500.

Which four steps must you perform to meet the requirements for the new portlet?

- A. Configure Oracle Web Services Manager (OWSM) on the portal container to generate a security token.
- B. Configure a cookie response in OAM to set the risk score into a cookie called HTTP_RISK_SCORE.
- C. Enable Identity Assertion propagation in the OAM policy.
