NEW QUESTION: 4

A storage administrator has an 8 TB database. Half of the data is hot and frequently accessed. The other half of the data is older with infrequently used cold data. The administrator purchased 12,800 GB SLC SSDs and placed them in a new disk folder called "Database".

The administrator then created volumes for this database in the Database disk folder using the recommended storage profile. After the database had been running for one month, the Statistics tab for the database volumes showed 100% of the space is on Tier 1. However, the administrator expected that half of the data would be on Tier 1 and the rest would be moved to lower tiers.

What are the reasons for this issue?

- A. Recommended storage profile will only use SSD tiers if any are available. Cold data cannot move to the lower tier disks.
- B. Sufficient space is available on Tier 1 for the entire 8 TB database. Event cold data will remain on Tier 1 until it becomes full.
- C. Data Progression does not run on database volumes. Database vendors have specific requirements for laying out their data across tiers.
- D. Volumes were created in the Database disk folder.

Data Progression cannot move the cold data to the lower tier disks
