- D. NVMe RAID 10, 'æ§ < æ ^ . ã . - ã . ¾ ã . ™ ã € ,

Answer: D

Explanation:

VM.DeselO2.24 compute instance include locally attached NVMe devices. These devices provide extremely low latency, high performance block storage that is ideal for big data, OLTP, and any other workload that can benefit from high-performance block storage.

A protected RAID array is the most recommended way to protect against an NVMe device failure. There are three RAID levels that can be used for the majority of workloads:

- RAID 1: An exact copy (or mirror) of a set of data on two or more disks; a classic RAID 1 mirrored pair contains two disks
 - RAID 10: Stripes data across multiple mirrored pairs. As long as one disk in each mirrored pair is functional, data can be retrieved
 - RAID 6: Block-level striping with two parity blocks distributed across all member disks
- If you need the best possible performance and can sacrifice some of your available space, then RAID 10 array is an option.
