NEW QUESTION: 2

- Which of the following are false about service protection and restoration on an ASON network?
- A. Typically, services are protected using the pre-allocated resources between NEs, These resources cannot be shared on the entire network.
 - B. When the route of a service fails, the network automatically seeks a substitute route, and the service restoration algorithm is different from the route selection algorithm.
 - C. Generally, protection switching time is less than 50 ms. During service rerouting, service routes need to be re-calculated. Therefore, service restoration time is longer, and a service can be restored in seconds.
 - D. Generally, services are restored using any resource between NEs.
 - E. To enable the service restoration function on an ASON network, you need to reserve some idle resources for service rerouting. Services are restored in rerouting mode on an ASON network.
