NEW QUESTION: 1
You have just developed a new mobile application that handles analytics workloads on large scale datasets that are stored on Amazon Redshift. Consequently, the application needs to access Amazon Redshift tables. Which of the below methods would be the best, both practically and security-wise, to access the tables? Choose the correct answer from the options below
A. Createan 1AM user and generate encryption keys for that user. Create a policy for RedShiftread-only access. Embed the keys in the application.
B. Createa RedShift read-only access policy in 1AM and embed those credentials in theapplication.
C. Createa HSM client certificate in Redshift and authenticate using this certificate.
D. Useroles that allow a web identity federated user to assume a role that allowsaccess to the RedShift table by providing temporary credentials.

Answer: D
Explanation:
Explanation
For access to any AWS service, the ideal approach for any application is to use Roles. This is the first preference. Hence option A and C are wrong.
For more information on 1AM policies please refer to the below link:
http://docs.aws.a mazon.com/IAM/latest/UserGuide/access_pol icies.html
Next for any web application, you need to use web identity federation. Hence option D is the right option. This along with the usage of roles is highly stressed in the AWS documentation.
"When you write such an app, you'll make requests to AWS services that must be signed with an AWS access key. However, we strongly recommend that you do not embed or distribute long-term AWS credentials with apps that a user downloads to a device, even in an encrypted store. Instead, build your app so that it requests temporary AWS security credentials dynamically when needed using web identity federation. The supplied temporary credentials map to an AWS role that has only the permissions needed to perform the tasks required by the mobile app".
For more information on web identity federation please refer to the below link:
http://docs.aws.amazon.com/IAM/latest/UserGuide/id_roles_provid ers_oidc.html
